FOR CHILDREN

NEW YORK
JOINT COMMITTEE ON METHODS OF PREVENTING DELINQUENCY

THIS directory of clinics offering psychiatric service to children who present behavior problems has been prepared in response to many requests for information regarding the number and location of such clinics and the type of service they offer. The list which follows is based upon the returns from a questionnaire sent out by the Joint Committee on Methods of Preventing Delinquency to all known clinics in the United States.

For the purposes of this questionnaire and the resulting directory it was considered that a psychiatric clinic might be defined in terms both of organization and of function. As here used the term means a clinic in which the staff includes as a minimum, a psychiatrist (i.e., a graduate of a recognized medical school who specializes in the treatment of nervous and mental disorders) as director, and assistants competent to give complete psychological examinations and to secure adequate social histories; in which the services of this staff are available to the public at regular intervals; and the function of which is primarily to study and treat behavior problems among children.

Among the clinics which returned information for the directory were a few that would have to be excluded under a strict application of the foregoing definition, since their directors were not psychiatrists. Nevertheless, their work extends beyond the testing of intelligence to include the diagnosis and treatment of the problem child, and facilities for psychiatric service are available. Several such organizations have been included in a supplementary list.

Clinic services limited to mental testing are not represented in the directory or in the appendix; nor are child study departments connected with public schools, although many of them are undoubtedly doing excellent work for problem children as such. Furthermore we have omitted specialized clinics such as those dealing with glandular disorders, speech defects, and the like; neurological clinics where no psychological or sociological examinations are made; children's wards in hospitals, or other forms of institutional care for nervous, epileptic, insane or feeble-minded children; psychiatric service given as a matter of routine by staff members to inmates of children's institutions or candidates for admission; or psychiatric service occasionally given on a volunteer basis by psychiatrists in private practice to children before juvenile courts or in children's institutions or awaiting placement by home-finding agencies.

This directory, then, indicates not the sum total of psychiatric service available to children throughout the country, but only that portion of it which has been systematically organized into clinic form. Still less have we tried to outline the entire activity of any agency or clinic which deals with adults as well as children. Thus, in describing state plans of care, only those parts are included which relate directly to the provision of psychiatric service to children.

The returns, limited as they have necessarily been to the simplest and easily ascertainable facts, show clearly certain significant trends. Among these are the establishment in increasing numbers of child guidance clinics not primarily for delinquent children but for all children in need of study; the rapid growth of habit clinics for the pre-school child; the development, by state departments, of traveling clinic service; the introduction, by boards of education, of psychiatric service for public school children.

No effort has been made to make a study of methods or to attempt an appraisal of work done. Inclusion in the directory means simply that the clinic, according to its own description of staff and work, conforms in general to the definitions of organization and function previously given. In the publication of data thus obtained it is scarcely necessary to state that no comparison of different grades of service is attempted. No visits of inspection or special investigations have been made to verify the information, which is given on the authority of the clinics themselves. The directory is therefore not to be regarded as in any sense an accredited list of such organizations, and no endorsement of a particular clinic is implied by its inclusion.

All the statements printed have been submitted to the directors of clinics, the heads of state departments or other responsible persons, for their official approval prior to publication. The list as a whole has also been submitted to the staff of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene, to various state committee secretaries, and to others whose competent assistance in scrutinizing the proof is gratefully acknowledged.

In spite of these precautions it is altogether likely that omissions or errors will be noted; also changes in clinics listed and the establishment of new clinics, unknown to us, are likely to have occurred during the process of compilation and publication. This first edition is purposely limited in size and a second printing will be undertaken as soon as the demand warrants it. The executive director of the Joint Committee will be grateful for suggestions and corrections which will enhance the accuracy and practical usefulness of this publication.

APPENDIX II

STATE PLANS FOR CLINIC SERVICE TO CHILDREN

ILLINOIS

Institute for Juvenile Research

The Illinois Institute for Juvenile Research, at 721 South Wood Street, Chicago, is one of two branches of the Division of Criminology of the State Department of Public Welfare. The other branch deals with the penal and correctional institutions. The work of the Institute is preventive in nature, and deals with the study and treatment of the behavior disorders of children. Children from any part of the state may be sent to the clinic headquarters at Chicago for examination and diagnosis, but the Institute has as yet no beds for out-of-town cases where observation over a prolonged period of time can be given. A branch of the Institute has been established at the Juvenile Detention Home of the Cook County Juvenile Court at Chicago, which serves only juvenile court cases.

Permanent extension clinics are held by the Institute staff at varying intervals of time at the following 17 towns and cities: Argo, Aurora, Benton, Chicago Heights, Cicero, Clinton, Duquoin, Evanston, Freeport, Joliet, LaSalle, Mt. Carmel, Oglesby, Ottawa, Peru, Spring Valley, and Wilmington.

In cooperation with the State Department of Public Health mental examinations of infants have been made at the annual Better Baby Conferences held at county fairs. The annual report of the state criminologist for 1922-1923 lists ten such conferences, at which approximately 3,000 babies were examined.

During the same year, in cooperation with the Illinois Society for Mental Hygiene, a complete survey was made of the mental health problems of the three cities of LaSalle, Peru, and Oglesby, in which approximately 6,500 school children were examined. As a result of this survey a Bureau of Educational Counsel has been established at the LaSalle-Peru High School under the direction of a psychiatric social worker and the Institute for Juvenile Research continues to furnish psychiatric service for special cases.

The social service department of the Institute receives a certain number of children's cases for clinic treatment, accepting full responsibility for the conduct of the case over an unlimited period of time, but the majority of its cases are handled in co-operation with other agencies which assume the responsibility of carrying out the treatment recommended by the Institute under its advisory supervision. Certain cases are selected by the Institute staff for research investigation and treatment.

The Institute staff conducts surveys of mental health at the various state institutions for children and advises the institution staffs on the type of care and training needed by individuals and groups. Occasionally the social service staff gives supervision to children on parole from state institutions who live in Chicago.

A special recreation worker is studying for the Institute the possibilities of recreation as a therapeutic agent in mental cases. The work has included a detailed study of the recreational facilities of Chicago and an advisory relationship has been established with several of the social agencies of the city, designed to develop further the idea of "recreation in case work and case work in recreation."

Additional work of an educational nature is done by the Institute through its weekly staff meetings. These meetings are thrown open to the professional group and serve as centers of discussion and interpretation of the mental problems of childhood. The Institute also accepts a limited number of students from accredited schools of social work for apprenticeship training.

The staff of the Institute is described on page 18. During the year ending June 30, 1924, 1,158 new cases came to the Institute, of which 1,123 were children and 35 adults. Nine hundred and eighty-six additional cases returned to the clinic for re-examinations, treatments, and completions. Statistics on the number of pre-school children are not available. Social agencies referred 663 cases; courts, 172; health agencies including physicians, 60; schools, 67; and relatives, parents, and friends, 196.

Jacksonville State Hospital

Although the bulk of the psychiatric clinic service for children provided by the state of Illinois comes from the Institute for Juvenile Research, certain state hospitals, through their traveling clinics, handle children's cases. The state hospital clinics are held primarily for the benefit of patients on parole but at the request of social workers, school nurses, and others, children are examined and recommendations are made as to their care, supervision, and home treatment. During the last nine months of 1924 a total of 41 children were examined in the six cities served by the Jacksonville State Hospital, of whom 25 were boys and 16 girls.

The clinics are staffed by a psychiatrist and a psychiatric social worker who is expert in the giving of mental tests. The social histories must be furnished by the agency or individual referring the child for examination and the responsibility for treatment rests with them.

Monthly clinics are held at Carlinville, Decatur, Jacksonville, Quincy, Springfield, and Taylorville.

INDIANA

Indiana University School of Medicine

The Neurological and Psychopathic Clinic of the Indiana University School of Medicine conducts five clinics at Indianapolis as listed on page 22.

76 DIRECTORY OF PSYCHIATRIC CLINICS

The clinics at the City Dispensary and the City Hospital serve only residents of the municipality. The clinics at the Robert W. Long Hospital and the James Whitcomb Riley Hospital for Children, both of which are state institutions, receive patients from all parts of Indiana.

The staff directly assigned to these various clinics by the University School of Medicine varies with the size of the clientele to be served. At the James Whitcomb Riley Hospital for Children there is a staff of five neurologists and psychiatrists, one psychologist, and one hospital social service worker. At the Robert W. Long Hospital one additional psychologist and one additional psychiatric social worker are employed. Neither of these clinics has completed its first year of existence and statistics are not yet available on the number of children's cases treated.

The object of the state-maintained clinics is not only to treat patients but to train personnel for clinic service as psychiatrists, psychologists, nurses, and psychiatric social workers. All the training courses are given as part of the work at the Medical School of the State University and the entire staffs of the School of Medicine, the Department of Psychology, and the Social Service Department of the University are available for consultation and teaching purposes.

The present plan of the University is not to establish a traveling clinic service but rather to help in the development of affiliated clinics in each county of the state. The role of the University staff is to assist in training personnel to act as consultants to examine special cases on request and to bring them, when necessary, to the state hospital for further examination and treatment.

MASSACHUSETTS

has organized one type of clinic service under the state hospitals and institutions and a second under the Mental Hygiene Division of the Department. It has assisted in organizing still a third type of clinic in co-operation with the State Department of Education.

The primary purpose of the first group of clinics is to give after-care to patients on parole from the state hospitals, but a certain number of individuals are also examined who come voluntarily or at the direction of some other agency. Some of these are children sixteen years of age and under, who have not previously been patients in a state hospital. Statistics as to the exact number of children so seen are not available but the total is thought to be small. The clinics are staffed by psychiatrists and psychiatric social workers from the several state hospitals and institutions, and are held at the intervals indicated, in the cities listed below. Clinics are also held at several state hospitals by appointment and elsewhere within their districts, on request. In this list the agency or institution by which the clinic service is provided stands first. Then comes the name of the town or city in which the clinic is conducted and a statement as to the frequency of clinic sessions.

In June 1923, a second type of clinic service was inaugurated by the Division of Mental Hygiene of the State Department of Mental Diseases, under the direction of Dr. Douglas A. Thom. These clinics are planned to care for individuals, both adults and children, who have had no previous contact with state hospitals. A certain number are especially designated as habit clinics for pre-school children and receive only children between two and eight years of age. All the clinics in this second group are served by the staff of the Division of Mental Hygiene. In June 1924 this staff comprised the following persons: one psychiatrist, full time; two psychiatrists, part time; one psychologist, full time; three assistant psychologists, part time; three psychiatric social workers, full time; three student and two volunteer psychiatric social workers, part time; a clinic manager, part

Reports were received giving the total number of children served by the habit clinics for pre-school children during their last report year. Four hundred and seventy-nine children were seen of whom 231 were boys and 248 girls. Three hundred and seventy-five were pre-school children. Health agencies and physicians referred 373 cases; the public schools, including the nursery schools, 40; parents, relatives, or friends, 23; social agencies, 31; and other agencies, 12.

Statistics were not available for children as distinct from adults for the other clinics conducted by the Division.

*Carried on under auspices of Women's Municipal League.

In addition to the work thus far described, Massachusetts has also established regional mental clinics for the examination of mentally retarded pupils in the public schools. This service is state-wide in scope, and is conducted by the State Department of Mental Diseases with the cooperation of the State Department of Education. The purpose of this clinic service is primarily to find the feeble-minded children in the state and to arrange for their training and protection. Its establishment was made possible by the enactment in 1919 of legislation which requires each school committee in the state to ascertain the number of children of school age retarded three years or more in mental development who are resident in each community, whether or not they are attending school and to provide special classes for such as can profit by them. A detailed report on the organization of the clinics, written by Dr. Walter E. Fernald, has been published by the National Committee for Mental Hygiene as Reprint No. 149. Approximately 4,500 cases were examined between March 1921 when the work began and May 1, 1922. Eventually every city and town in Massachusetts will receive this clinic service.

Each clinic is staffed by a psychiatrist who has received special training for this work, a psychologist, a psychiatric social worker, and a stenographer. Children are selected for examination by the local school authorities. The social worker goes to the city six weeks in advance of the clinic group and makes the necessary preliminary arrangements, which include the selection of a teacher competent to give the school tests and a school nurse or other school employee competent to secure the social histories. Sometimes it is necessary to train local people for these tasks. The school and family history is supposed to be written up before the clinic staff arrives. After arrival the psychological examination is made by the clinic psychologist and the psychiatrist makes the physical and psychiatric examination and formulates the diagnosis and recommendations. A formal report for each pupil examined is made to the local superintendent of schools.

MICHIGAN

While the state of Michigan has developed no definite program for providing psychiatric service to children, certain of the state hospitals conduct traveling out-patient clinics at which a considerable number of children are seen. These clinics are, in the case of the Kalamazoo State Hospital and the Traverse City State Hospital, staffed by a psychiatrist and a psychologist from the hospital staff. The social work is done by representatives of the courts or local social agencies. The clinics are held under the auspices of the State Hospital Commission, R. G. Ferguson, Chairman, as listed below:

Reports received from the Kalamazoo State Hospital and the Newberry State Hospital show a total of 265 children handled during 1923-1924. Of these, 144 were boys and 121 girls. Eighteen were pre-school children.

The State University at Ann Arbor maintains the State

Psychopathic Hospital of which Albert M. Barrett, M.D. is director. In addition to the out-patient clinic at Ann Arbor (see page 32) the State Psychopathic Hospital also furnishes psychiatric service to the Wayne County (Detroit) Psychopathic Clinic (see page 32).

NEW JERSEY

Since 1918, New Jersey has had its Psychiatric Clinic organized under the State Department of Institutions and Agencies, with headquarters at the State Hospital at Trenton. (See page 37.) This clinic has provided the special diagnostic services both for the correctional institutions of the state and for out-patients referred from communities in central and southern New Jersey. The Morris Plains Hospital serves communities in the northern part of the state. Neither hospital has as yet developed any regular traveling clinic service to communities although this is contemplated.

The figures from the Trenton State Hospital for 1923-1924, which include inmates examined at the State School for Boys and the State School for Girls, give a total of 900 children handled, of whom 600 were boys and 300 girls. None were pre-school children. The Morris Plains Hospital, between January 1, 1923 and June 1, 1924 examined 18 children, of whom 11 were boys and 7 girls. Three were pre-school children.

The entire resources of the local hospital or institution staffs and of the State Psychiatric Clinic are available for this clinic service. The State Psychiatric Clinic is staffed by 4 psychiatrists, 6 psychologists, 2 clinical assistants (college graduates who have specialized in psychology and who desire to get actual clinical experience on a training basis) and 3 clerk-stenographers.

NEW YORK

The New York State Hospital Commission and the New York State Commission for Mental Defectives furnish clinic

service to nearly one hundred towns and cities. The following description of the general plan under which these clinics are operated under the auspices of the respective state departments and by cooperative arrangements between them is based upon reports dated December 1, 1924.

State Hospital Commission

The New York State Hospital Commission, Dr. C. Floyd Haviland, Chairman, Albany, N. Y. has charge of 14 state hospitals and the State Psychiatric Institute, which were, on December 1, 1924, conducting 44 mental clinics. These clinics are conducted, according to the Commission, as "an aid in reestablishing paroled and discharged patients in their respective homes and communities and for the benefit of persons suffering with nervous or mental disease or defect. No fees are charged, except at clinic at Cornell Medical College.

"Each clinic is in charge of a specialist who makes diagnosis and gives advice and treatment. A hospital social worker attends the clinic to give patients needed assistance in adjusting themselves to their environment. Nervous and retarded school children are examined upon request of parents and advice in regard to special training is given. Any person who desires a frank interview about his own mental condition or that of a relative or friend is invited to visit the clinic nearest his home. Physicians, clergymen, social workers, teachers, and social agencies are requested to bring or refer cases to the clinic for consultation.

"The clinics are subject to inspection by the deputy medical inspector, Dr. Philip Smith, who has been designated by the State Hospital Commission to supervise clinic work.

"Arrangements have been made for the cooperation of the State Hospital Commission with the State Commission for Mental Defectives in holding clinics for mental and nervous cases in various cities of the state. Special joint clinics with other state departments are arranged from time to time."

84 DIRECTORY OF PSYCHIATRIC CLINICS

The State Hospital Commission does not publish statistics of clinic cases by age groups and it was impossible to secure from all the hospitals complete returns on the number of children, 16 years of age or under, served by their staffs. Returns covering the last fiscal year for the Binghamton, Brooklyn, Hudson River, Kings Park, and Middletown State Hospitals and for two clinics carried on by the Gowanda State Homeopathic Hospital (those at Olean and Salamanca) gave a total of 193 children, of whom 114 were boys and 79 girls. Twenty were listed as pre-school cases. While the sources of reference were not listed for all cases, it is interesting to see that 22 children came as a result of the newspaper notices of the clinic, five came "of their own initiative," and one was sent by the "political leader of his district." In general, wherever a clinic is held in conjunction with the State Commission for Mental Defectives, the latter handles all cases of children.

State Commission for Mental Defectives

The State Commission for Mental Defectives, Dr. Sanger Brown, II, Chairman, Albany, N. Y., maintains 51 regular clinics, most of them held monthly. These clinics are free and are conducted as a part of the extra-institutional program of the Commission, for the purpose of identifying the mental defectives in the community and making recommendations for their care. The end in view is to supervise as many defectives as possible in their own homes so that the limited number of beds in the institutions may be available for anti-social cases and those not receiving proper care.

The regular clinics are supplemented by occasional clinics, in the smaller towns, and by traveling clinics which make circuits through the rural districts throughout the state. The traveling clinics are a recent development and have proved to be a very efficient means of serving isolated sections at a low cost.

Each clinic is in charge of a psychiatrist assisted by one of the field agents of the Commission. A psychiatric, physical, and psychological examination is made and a social history is taken. Recommendations are then made covering three fields—physical, social, and educational (or vocational if over school age). Recommendations are followed up by the field agent and by the local agencies.

During the year 1923-1924, with 22 clinics in operation, 223 clinic sessions were held at which 1,059 cases were examined. Eight hundred and fifty-seven of these were new cases. About 70 per cent were under sixteen years of age.

OHIO

The State Department of Public Welfare conducts the Bureau of Juvenile Research with offices at 2280 West Broad Street, Columbus. The purpose of the Bureau is "to investigate the causes and motives of juvenile misconduct or delinquency with the ultimate idea of preventing or eradicating it."

A boy or girl under twenty-one years of age may be admitted to the Bureau for examination and study in one of the following ways:

The Director of Welfare of the State of Ohio may order the transfer of a minor ward of the state, resident in a state institution or on parole from a state institution (industrial schools, reformatories, Institution for the Feeble-minded, Hospital for Epileptics, state hospitals, schools for the blind and deaf) to the Bureau for study and recommendation as to suitable disposition.

Any juvenile court of the state may commit a minor temporarily for examination and recommendation after which the child is to be returned to the court which will then dispose of the case as it may deem advisable.

The juvenile court may commit a minor permanently to the Bureau which may then dispose of the case itself.

Any child-caring agency of the county or city, any social agency encountering problems of child conduct, any parent or legal guardian of a child may refer the child to the Bureau for examination and observation. Upon the conclusion of the examination the child is to be called for by the agency sending it. Such agencies are expected to communicate with the executive physician of the Bureau before sending cases.

Cases may also be brought to the Bureau for examination in its clinic. Such cases do not remain in the Bureau; they come merely for the examination which usually requires about two hours. Appointments for such examinations must be made by letter or telephone.

The headquarters of the Bureau at Columbus now comprise a laboratory building and two cottages with a total capacity of 100, where children may be received for extended observation. Seven hundred and twenty-one children were thus received during 1920-1922. Of these 473 were boys and 248 girls. Twenty were pre-school children.

On request the Bureau also conducts surveys and holds mental clinics in different parts of the state. Public and parochial schools, county homes, orphanages and other institutions caring for groups of children may have them surveyed mentally and physically by the Bureau staff.

Counties in Ohio may also secure mental clinic service. In these county clinics children from schools, courts, and other sources are examined as well as adults, particularly those who at one time were residents of a state hospital; and the children of parents who may be residents of state hospitals. Such clinics are usually conducted in the county seat with the cooperation, consent, and assistance of the county medical society or other agency.

During the first 18 months covered by the report for 1920-1922, 67 clinics were held in 23 different counties of the state, at which 1,031 individuals were examined. Most of these were children. The number of requests from different agencies for clinics of this sort were as follows: 40 from school authorities; 17 from social organizations; 5 from the Red Cross; 3 held in conjunction with medical clinics; and 2 from the courts.

These clinics are staffed by a psychiatrist and a psychologist from the Bureau. The agencies which refer children for examination are expected to supply social histories and to assume responsibility for treatment in accordance with the recommendations of the Bureau. The State Department of Welfare provides uniform blanks and questionnaires for this purpose.

Although the Ohio Bureau of Juvenile Research handles most of the children in need of psychiatric clinic service, certain of the state hospitals acting on their own initiative also occasionally furnish psychiatric service to problem children in connection with their outpatient clinics. The Lima State Hospital states that children are occasionally referred to its staff for examination and report. The Dayton State Hospital lends its superintendent as director of the Dayton Mental Hygiene Clinic which is carried on by the Public Health League and the Community Chest (see page 56). The Massillon State Hospital conducts an out-patient clinic at the hospital, at which 134 children were examined during the last fiscal year. In March 1921 the Toledo State Hospital opened a psychopathic clinic in cooperation with the Toledo District Nurses' Association. During the year ending June 30, 1924, this clinic handled a total of 43 children, of whom 15 were boys and 28 girls (see page 56).

PENNSYLVANIA

The Bureau of Mental Health, Dr. William C. Sandy, Director, organized under the State Department of Welfare at Harrisburg, was in December 1924 conducting the 38 traveling clinics listed below. Each clinic is staffed by a psychiatrist and a secretary. The psychiatrist is usually a staff member from one of the state or county hospitals, although volunteer service by psychiatrists in private practice is occasionally utilized and two clinics are served by a psychiatrist attached to the Bureau of Mental Health. The secretary is usually a social worker or nurse, resident in the community to be served. She supplies applicants for examination with the standard history blank, which is supposed to be filled out before the psychiatrist arrives. She also arranges, where possible, to have psychological and physical examinations made in advance, secures copies of the school record and the teacher's estimate of the child in cases of school children, and makes the appointments for interviews with the psychiatrist. In certain cases a field representative of the Bureau of Mental Health acts as secretary of the local clinic. These field agents, of whom there are three, are required to have at least a year of graduate work in psychology which gives them training sufficient to qualify as expert psychometrists. In communities where no other person with these qualifications is available for clinic service, the field representatives make the mental tests, secure the social histories of the patients, and follow up the cases to make sure that the clinic recommendations are carried out.

Reports received from every clinic in the state showed a total of 1,412 children's cases handled during the last fiscal year,¹ of whom 99 were pre-school children. In all but two clinics the sources from which cases were received were listed in detail. They represented for 31 clinics the following:

THE COMMONWEALTH FUND PROGRAM FOR THE PREVENTION OF DELINQUENCY

The Commonwealth Fund initiated in 1921 a five-year Program for the Prevention of Delinquency. The purpose of this Program is to demonstrate the value and promote the wider application of modern psychiatric service and visiting teacher methods to the study and guidance of children presenting problems of behavior and other maladjustments in school and society.

Problem children, it is recognized, do not all become delinquent in subsequent life, but there is growing evidence that adult criminality has its roots in childhood in the same factors which cause early disorders of behavior. The understanding and adjustment of children whose conduct suggests underlying mental or physical difficulties should, therefore, make for the prevention not only of juvenile delinquency but of later and more serious criminal tendencies. Even when delinquency is not involved, such study and treatment of problem children should remove the cause of much unhappiness both at the time and throughout life.

The Program consists of a group of related activities made possible by grants from the Fund to four cooperating agencies each of which administers independently a division of the undertaking.

DIVISION I

New York School of Social Work, 105 East 22d St., New York

PORTER R. LEE, Director

MARION E. KENWORTHY, M.D., Medical Director

Bureau of Children's Guidance

The New York School of Social Work offers courses and fellowships for the training of psychiatric social workers, visiting teachers, and probation officers; in this connection it maintains a clinic known as the Bureau of Children's Guidance, for the study and treatment of children referred to it from schools and other sources. This clinic seeks to demonstrate thoroughly the potentialities of such treatment, and to provide opportunities for observation and field work by students in training.

DIVISION II

Division on the Prevention of Delinquency, National Committee for Mental Hygiene, 370 Seventh Avenue, New York

FRANKWOOD E. WILLIAMS, M.D., Medical Director
National Committee for Mental Hygiene.

RALPH P. TRUITT, M.D., Director
Division on the Prevention of Delinquency

The Division on the Prevention of Delinquency of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene provides demonstration psychiatric clinics in selected cities, and a field consultant service, with the object of bringing about the establishment of permanent clinics under local auspices to serve children referred by schools, social agencies, juvenile courts, and parents.

DIVISION III

*National Committee on Visiting Teachers, 8 West 40th Street
New York*

HOWARD W. NUDD, Chairman
JANE F. CULBERT, Secretary

The National Committee on Visiting Teachers, affiliated with the Public Education Association of New York City, cooperates with local school boards of thirty communities throughout the country in providing visiting teachers, in order to demonstrate the value of such service in the adjustment of children whose scholarship, behavior, environment, or mental condition has prevented them from gaining full benefit from their school opportunities. It is hoped that permanent establishment of such service, wholly supported by the local communities, will result.

DIVISION IV

*Joint Committee on Methods of Preventing Delinquency

The Joint Committee on Methods of Preventing Delinquency, which includes the executive heads of all Divisions of the Program, is designed to promote the unity of the entire enterprise, to co-ordinate its various activities, to conduct related investigations and field studies, and to interpret the purpose, methods, and results to various specially interested groups and to the public generally.

Inquiries concerning the Program may be addressed to the Executive Director of the Joint Committee on Methods of Preventing Delinquency, or concerning the work of a particular Division, to the Director thereof.
